- 1. Make a list of what is important to you and what you want in a job.
- 2. Based on your list, ask questions at your interview in order to make sure that this office will meet your goals.
- 3. Take your time and interview a number of offices before making a decision.
- 4. Once you find your dream job, challenge yourself by taking Continuing Education courses to expand your skill set and knowledge about new processes, products and services within your field.

Dental Careers

- 5. Meet your colleagues: Start a study club or networking group with colleagues that you refer patients to or who refers patients to you. Knowing the people at the specialty offices that you refer patients to will put the patients more at ease as you refer to the front desk or assistant from the other office on a first name basis.
- 6. Network with members and learn about what members of your local association is lobbying. This may effect the way you perform your daily duties at your dental job.
- 7. Consider that once a quarter, you get your office involved in your community by donating a half a day at a local elementary school or nursing home. Offer home care instructions, hand out free toothbrushes or denture brushes with your office contact information on them. Invite your local newspaper to do a community story about the event. This would be a great marketing tool as well as helping your community.

Dental Opportunities

- 8. The holidays invite holiday cheer and fun for all. Enjoy your office parties not only during the month of December, but hold your monthly office meetings out of the office environment. Combine it with a social outing where spouses can join up after the business is completed.
